

Begin with everyday life

Blank planning aid. Keep completed client information in your own secure system.
Short answers are useful. Leave unknowns explicit and discuss them together.

1. Project and contact

Record the project reference, preferred contact channel, and property location in your private copy. Ask only for contact information you need.

2. Who uses the room?

Ask about routines, visitors, pets, changing household needs, and any access requirements the client wants to share.

3. What works today?

Identify existing qualities worth keeping before discussing replacements.

4. What is difficult today?

Ask for specific moments: where belongings collect, when light is uncomfortable, or how activities compete.

Continue the conversation

Blank planning aid. Keep completed client information in your own secure system.
Short answers are useful. Leave unknowns explicit and discuss them together.

5. What should it feel like?

Request a few references and ask what the client likes about each: light, material, layout, or atmosphere. Do not assume they want every object shown.

6. What must stay?

List retained objects and fixed conditions. Confirm dimensions and condition separately at survey.

7. Budget and timing

Distinguish an overall allowance from design fees, purchasing, and installation. Record target dates and their reasons without promising feasibility.

8. Who decides, and what happens next?

Identify who consolidates feedback and how decisions will be recorded. Agree the next meeting and outstanding information.
